"That the contract for the boat service shall be given to the Potomac Steamboat Company in preference to any other, only provided that that company would perform it for the same pay as other responsible parties."

The question of the necessity of a connec

The disastrous effect of this connection on the interest of the State in the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company is fully set forth in a paper herewith submitted, marked "B," and forming part of this communication, entitled "A Brief History of the Potomac Steamboat Company, and a Protest against its Retinion with the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company";

Referred to the Coming the matter fully discussed, made the fort that deterred a great number of the members from attending the musicale. The extreme warmth was oppressive alike to the audience and musicians; the latter seemed to suffer greatly. We particularly sympathized with Mr. Laube, and shared the uneasiness he must have felt while playing the difficult violin solo : lest the strings of his instrument, so treacherous in rules the resolution lies over until the next such weather, should stretch or give way. His execution of "La Petit Tambour," by David, with orchestral accompaniment, was graceful and finished. Mr. Grant sang two solos, "Hearest Thou," by Mattei, and "Let Me Dream Again," by Sullivan, with spirit and pleasing effect. We must particularly compliment him upon his admirable conception and rendition of the latter piece, for he not only succeeded in almost disguising the fact that he was not in voice, but gave the true sentiment of the production with such correctness that it must have been readily eaught y his audience in all its perfection. The "Largo" by Handel, played on violins, viola, organ, and piano, was truly majestie.

The manner in which the opening overture, "Zampa," was rendered by the orchestra readily impressed one with the fact that the effects of the glorious Fourth had not been entirely dispelled, and that impression assumed, as it were, a reality when the flourish of trumpets, firing of crackers, torpedoes, etc., at the conclusion of the programme, succeeded in producing a noise that would have gladdened the heart of the the pay of the Chief of Police twenty per suffering with those peculiar dragging-down sensa-
